Chernenko Insists on U.S. Move For Talks

By John F. Burns New York Times Service

MOSCOW - Konstantin U. Chernenko, the Soviet leader, said Monday that talks with the United States on limiting strategie and medium-range nuclear weapons could he resumed at any moment if Washington removed the obstacles it created by deploying new mis-

Mr. Chernenko's remarks, at a 35-minute meeting with the West German opposition leader, Hans-Jochen Vogel, appeared to mark no substantive change in the position set out by Mr. Chernenko and his predecessor as Communist Party chief, the late Yuri V. Andropov. Both leaders placed the blame for the breakdown of the talks last year on the United States and said that it was up to Washington to create conditions that would make resumption possible.

The Soviet Union is still ready to resume the problem of both strategic and European nuclear armaments on a constructive, mutually acceptable basis, Mr. Chernenko said, as quoted by Tass news agen-

He added: "The talks can beresumed at any moment; let only the United States remove the obstacles which it created by fielding its new missiles in Europe. Then there will be no need for our response measures.

The Kremlin broke off negotia-tions in Geneva on Nov. 24 after the first batteries of medium-range Pershing-2 and cruise missiles were transported to their bases in West Germany and Britain. It followed up by adjourning the negotiations on strategic wenpons without Vice President Walter F. Mondale agreeing to a date for their resump-

The suspension of the two sets of talks is believed to have been a central concern of U.S. policy-makers who met in Washington earlier this month for a review of U.S.-Soviet relations. myko. Neither side has revealed any details of the Hartman-Gromyke discussion. But in his remarks to Mr. Vogel, Mr. Chernenko implied that nothing had transpired to raise the Kremlin's hopes of renewed negotiations on nuclear arms or its willmaness to suspend countermeasures it has ordered in response to the U.S. deployments in Furope.

"Regretiably, no signs are in sight of the U.S. government's the limitation and reduction of nuclear armaments on the basis of the principle of equality and equal se-curity," Mr. Chemenko said. He added: "We respond, naturally, to the attempts by the United States and the NATO bloc to create an additional strategic threat to us through stationing in Western Eurone American first-strike weapons by adopting necessary defense countermeasures, rather than hy surrendering our positions."

Gemayel Praises Assad As Peace Talks Open

By Jack Redden

United Press Intern LAUSANNE, Switzerland -The leaders of Lebanon's factions began peace talks on Monday with President Amin Gemayel calling for an end to nine years of "insane and continuous war."

HAVANA — Reacting to the Grenada experience, Cuba has reduced the number of advisers working in Nicaragua and rotated civilians there to include younger

In December, Cuba reduced the oumber of civilian advisers it had in Nicaragua. Cuban advisers left Nicaragua or how many have returned.

Sandinist and U.S. officials say about 2,000 left when the Christmas holidays began and that about half that many have returned in recent weeks, meaning a net decline of about 1,000. Most of those who were oot replaced were believed to be civilians, mostly teachers whose positions were filled by oewly trained Nicaraguans.

Mr. Rodriguez said that most of those who returned to Cuba were students and professors.

The oumber of Cubans in Nicaagua, particularly military advisers, has been a central issue in Reagan administration complaints about the Marxist-oriented Sandinist government, U.S. officials estimated the pre-cutback total at 6,000, including 2,000 military or security advisers, 2,000 teachers and 2,000 doctors, engineers and

After 34 Years in Prison, Man Freed by Japan Court

TOKYO --- A death row inmate who spent 34 years behind bars and faced the gallows for allegedly killing a black-market rice dealer was freed Monday by a court decision that nullified his sentence and declared him not guilty.

Supporters cried "Banzai!"
when the outcome of the retrial for Shigeyoshi Taniguchi, 53, was made known outside the district court in Takamatsu, on Japan's main southwestern is-land of Shikoku.

"Everything I see is glitter-ing." Mr. Taniguchi said at a news conference outside the courthouse. "All I want to do now is to go back to my village and till the land." The Kyodo News Service said Mr. Tanignchi was entitled to receive the equivalent of $328,000 in inmnity for the years he spent in prison. Mr. Taniguchi was accused of the February 1950 rohberyslaying of a 63-year-old black-market rice dealer. The equivalent of $36 was taken from the victim. Mr. Taniguchi, then 19, was arrested a month after the killing and has been in prison ever since. He was convicted and condemned to death by hanging in 1951.

Shigeyoshi Taniguchi

Mr. Taniguchi's initial appeals were rejected, and the death sentence was upheld by a 1957 Supreme Court ruling. He continued to wage a legal battle for a new trial and, in 1976, the Supreme Court finally granted his request, sending the case back to the district court. The judge ruled Monday that the prosecutor's evidence was inadequate for a conviction.

U.S. Pilots Begin Flying Salvador Spy Missions

Jordanians Vote in By-Elections

AMMAN. Jordan (Reuters) - Jordanians voted Monday in by. elections to fill eight vacant seats in the lower house of the National Assembly from constituencies on the East Bank of the Jordan River. The seats were made vacant by the deaths of members since 1974, when King Hussein suspended parliament. The king recalled the chamber in January for what he said were constitutional reasons to avoid leaving the house without a quorum. The last elections were held in 1967, shortly before the Arab-Israeli war in which the Israelis occupied the West Bank.

The lower house has 60 seats, split evenly between the East and West Banks. The vacant seats in the Israeli-occupied West Bank will be filled by a vote of lower house members. The initial turnout was low, but the authorities later reported a rush at polling places, which were guarded by civilian and military police. No incidents were reported.

Hart's Veteran Adviser Ex-Pollster for Carter Shaped Theme On Democrats' 'Generational Divide'

By Martin Schram

Washington Post Service WASHINGTON - On New Year's Eve, with his presidential campaign stalled, Senator Gary Hart reached out for something new. He found Patrick H. Caddell.

Mr. Caddell, 33, a veteran of such campaigns as one waged in 1976 by a former Georgia governor camed Jimmy Carter, arrived that night at Mr. Hart's home in Bethesda, Maryland, carrying a 150-page tome on how to win the 1984 presidential contest.

Their meeting was described by both as brutally frank. Associates say it may have been pivotal in turning the Colorado senator to-ward his crucial triumph Feb. 28 over the previous front-runners, former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Senator John Glenn of Ohio, in the Democratic presidential primary in New Hamp-

Mr. Caddell was said to have told Mr. Hart that his campaign had been a disaster, that he had the greatest potential of anyone in the Democratic field but that he had done everything wrong. He said Mr. Hart had the right issues but oo theme.

Mr. Caddell left a blueprint with the Colorado senator that night. Mr. Caddell had written it that fall, not with Mr. Hart in mind, but to try to persuade Senator Joseph R. Biden Jr., a Delaware Democrat, or some comparable figure to run.

A copy of the memo, dated Oct. 25, 1983, was made available to The Washington Post by a source other than Mr. Caddell.

Mr. Caddell wrote that the Democratic Party "is suffering a bad case of eninu which leaves it defensive and reactive, unsure of its purpose and role; it is broken into fieldoms whose warlords are its clamoring constituencies."
He wrote that the "Baby Boom generation is coming to life politi-cally," A division "is becoming more apparent," he added, between the party's "older, traditional leadership" and younger Democrats "who came to politics through the anti-war movement and are now coming of age as elected and party profits first to one that puts human needs before profits," Mr. Mason

Of Mr. Hart, he wrote: "Hart said. probably comes closest to understanding and articulating the a chance in a presidential election emerging generational divide in the

But Mr. Caddell added that despite this asset, Mr. Hart had not challenged Mr. Mondale and Mr. Glenn, "His failure to rise to that level reflects what critics say is attributable to an inability to excite, to exude or stir passion, to develop a thematic message with a sharp edge," Mr. Caddell wrote. "Lacking a natural constituency or regional base, Hart more than most needs to make the idea-thrust click, and it just hasn't.

Of Mr. Mondale, Mr. Caddell wrote: "The front-runner for sure, but one plagued hy severe doubts even in his own ranks. Few believe he can win a general election; some suspect that if wounded early he will not be able to recover. He added: "Some think he is a candidate without a message."

Of Mr. Glenn, Mr. Caddell wrote: "Gleno's caodidacy has been sluggish ... Despite an attempt to identify traditional values as a campaign theme, Glenn is plagued by a sense that he has no real message, that his instincts are basically conservative."

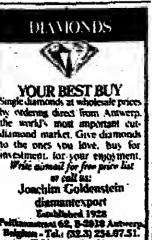

Mr. Caddell's thesis was that there was a way to assure that the froot-runners did not win the nomination.

He wrote: "There exists all the conditions for a late and successful candidacy: a compelling and invincible message as yet unarticulated by any of the current contenders, a weak field without a candidate who presides over a sizable natural electoral base, and a party elite-activist corps not only unmobilized but also restless and yearning."

In fact, by New Year's Eve, Mr. Hart had aiready been trying out a campaign based on a slogan writ-ten by his campaign manager, Oli-ver Henkel: "The next generation of leadership - uniting old values with new perspectives and ideas." What Mr. Caddell did was to reinforce that line of counseling Mr. Caddell could speak bluntly to Mr. Hart that night in Bethesda because they were old acquaiotances. In 1972, Mr. Hart was the manager of Sepator George S. Mc-Govern's presidential campaign. Mr. Caddell, just out of Harvard University, was the campaign's pollster. While Mr. Hart went on to the Senate, Mr. Caddell became polister to Mr. Carter in 1976 and was more circuitous. He began the pre-1984 campaign season aligned with Senator Edward M. Kennedy, Democrat of Massachusetts.

After Mr. Kennedy left the race, he advised Senator Dale Bumpers, Democrat of Arkansas, oo his prospects. After Mr. Bumpers decided against running, Mr. Caddell drafted a speech for Mr. Biden that drew ovations in New Jersey and Maine and that brought Mr. Biden to the brink of candidacy.

Bulgarian's Anniversary Passes Unremarked

By Richard Balmforth Reuters

SOFIA — Todor Zhivkov, 72, has completed 30 years as head of Bulgaria's ruling Communist Par-ty. Bul one would have to dig out the history books to know it.

Mr. Zhivkov's low-key approach to power was underlined by the conspicuous lack of public fanfare that accompanied his anniversary March 4. There were no commemorative issues of the state-controlled newspapers; the anniversary was not even mentioned.

This was unusual for Communist Eastern Europe, where the official media often try to create excite-ment about the political anniversaries of leaders.

The Bulgarian party daily's main front-page story March 4 was devoted to a speech by the new Soviet leader, Konstantin U. Chernenko. Self-effacement before Moscow and a low-key image at home are among the elements that have contributed to Mr. Zhivkov's political longevity.

A Western diplomat said: "He's kept to a winning formula right from the start; keep right in with Moscow but get as good a deal as possible for the people."

He has outlasted three Soviet leaders — Nikita S. Khrushchev, Leonid I. Brezhnev and Yuri V. Andropov - and has made it his business to get along with all in them. Among Warsaw Pact party chiefs, Hungary's Janos Kadar. who came to power in 1956, is the closest to him in tenure.

Mr. Zhivkov is widely popular at bome, which probably results from the dramatic rise in living stan dards during his rule.

The supply of fresh fruit and vegetables in shops is the envy of Soviet tourists who visit the country. Mr. Zhivkov has overseen many pro-consumer economic changes that have drawn favorable comparisons with richer neighbors.

"A lot has played in Zhivkov's favor," said a Western diplomat. "This is a country with only a limited intelligentsia and is not a hotbed for dissent and challenge to Communist rule." It took Mr. Zhivkov several years to consolidate his position after being elected first secretary of the party's Central Committee in 1954. He apparently was a compromise candidate agreed on hy opposing factions within the party.

By the mid-1960s, he had neutralized all political rivals. In 1971, he assumed the additional post of head of state.

Recent events in Bulgaria have shown that Mr. Zhivkov's political instincts are still sharp. In September, he apparently engineered the downfall of a Polithuro member, Alexander Lilov, who generally was regarded as the candidate most likely to succeed him.

Western diplomats said Mr. Lilov may have gotten in trouble with Mr. Zhivkov for implicitly criticizing his late daughter, Ludmila Zhivkova, who was culture minister when she died in 1981.

Mr. Zhivkov's position may have been further strengthened by a reshuffle in the government and party leadership in January in which two of his supporters were added to

"Zhivkov is now in a position of undisputed authority and is still politically very capable," a diplomat said. "Only death nr a personal decision to step down is likely to change the man at the top."

The exact nature of Mr. Zhivkov's relations with Mr. Chernenko are unknown, though he knew Mr.

Todor Zhivkov

Chernenko well when he was Brezhnev aide.

"It wouldn't make any difference even if Zhivkov didn't know Chernenko," a Bulgarian said. "He'd simply make it his business to get on the best terms with him. He's done that with all of them." ■ New Ambassador to Rome

The Italian Foreign Ministry said Monday it had accepted a new Bulgarian ambassador, 15 months after his predecessor was recalled during an uproar over the so-called Bulgarian connection to the shootring of the pope, The Associated Press reported from Rome.

The Foreign Ministry said in a communique that it had accepted

Raico Marinov Nicolov as the new envoy from Sofia.

Mr. Kozev was recalled to Sofia on Dec. 9, 1982, for what the Bulgarian government said were "nor-mal consultations." Two days later, Italy recalled its ambassador to Bulgaria. The embassies in Sofia and Rume have been run by a chargé d'affaires since then.

The recalls occurred at the heigh of tension between Italy and Bulgaria over accusations that Bulgari-1981, attempted as Pope John Paul II.

MOSCOW -- Tass, usually the medium of official Soviet pronouncements, switched to more offbeat reporting Monday when it mistakenly transmitted album sleeve details from a foreign pop record.

Then Korean Air Lines designed its new Prestige business class it used First Class on other airlines as its minimum standard.

That's why there are only 24 seats, right up front, in our B747's. They're all exactly the same as those in our First Class -soft, leather-covered, luxuriously big and you have 41 inches of legroom.

First class comfort at a business class fare! Superb food, two films en route (with First Class headset), an in-

Food Reform in Africa

Africa needs emergency food aid, and quickly. The century's worst drought grips a score of countries in southern Africa, threatening lives and stability. But weather is not the only culprit. If Africa is to feed itself in years ahead, it also needs incentives to scrap a failed marketing system that in too many countries keeps farmers poor and granaries empty.

So contends the Reagan administration m proposing a two-track response: immediate food for Africa's hungry, and a five-year, $500-million "economie policy initiative" to promote reform of unworkable marketing policies. Io this case, productive diplomacy and President Reagan's free market insuncts go hand in hand. Indeed, development experts at the United Nations and the World Bank have long pleaded for the concerted effort that the Reagan administration has proposed.

In the past two decades Africa's per capita food output has declined by a fifth. The grevous results have been bunger at home, depen-dence on imported food, and declining income from exports. A major cause of this downward spiral has been the failure to provide adequate compensation to farmers. And the main blame for that falls on the state marketing boards that were established in most African countries when they became independent. The idea was to speed development and generate revenues by making the state the sole buyer of farm produce. But, in the main, the marketing boards have kept prices down to provide cheap food for urban consumers. Predictably, farmers went broke and swarmed to cities, impelling insecure governments to try all the harder to pacify restless urban populations with cheap food. The damage has been compounded by overvaluing currencies, osten-sibly to make imports cheaper for infant industries. But overvaluation makes exports less compenitive and increases the addiction of ruling elites to imported luxuries. Worst of all, the system is self-reinforcing. Once trapped, a weak regime feels that it would be politically disastrous to end "cheap food," repair exchange rates and raise farm income.

It would do Africa no favor for America to rush in with $95 million worth of food without helping governments to escape this cycle of impoverishment. Mr. Reagan's proposals may be helpful if grants are conditioned on political reforms, if money is channeled into crop re-search and technical assistance and if other donors and development agencies join in the effort. Africa's climate may be beyond human remedy, but there is nothing immutable about unworkable policies. Finding ways to reshape them is a worthy ambicon.

Where Mr. Meese Misses

While Edwin Meese has rested his case for Senate confirmation as attorney general, trouhlesome questions remain about his fitness for one of the nation's loftiest positions of trust.

That the questions are raised by policical antagonists, notably Senator Howard Metzenbaum, Democrat of Ohio, hardly diminishes their seriousness or excuses Mr. Meese's inability to dispose of them cleanly

A president ordinarily should have the attorney general he wants. Mr. Meese, though slight of legal stature, is experienced in law enforcement and meets the minimum qualifications. He might be entitled to assume, as a Democratic senator quipped, that the Republican Senate "would confirm Jack the Ripper as Surgeon General."

But Mr. Meese is asking more than tolerance by Democrats and loyalty from Republicans. His nomination asks that they ratify behavior that any mildly suspicious attorncy general would be moved to investigate.

Mr. Meese's accountant, John McKean, arranged $60,000 in loans for his client, then White House counselor, and subsequently became chairman of the U.S. Postal Service's board of governors, Mr. Meese approved the appointment without cotifying anyone of his conflict of interest. Understandably but un-convincingly, both men deny any connection between one favor and the other.

Thomas Barrack, a developer, absorbed a $32,500 loss in the sale of Mr. Meese's California bome and then became deputy undersecretary of interior. Officers of the bank that gave Mr. Meese $480,000 of credit and tolerated 15 missed mortgage payments, also obtained gov-ernment jobs in Washington.

Mr. Metzenbaum also challenged Mr. Meese to explain memoranda suggesting he knew, while campaign chief, about documents filched from President Jimmy Carter. Mr. Meese replied all too carefully. He cannot be seen the most decrease. recall seeing the most damaging memos. He did not know of "any effort" by Reagan supporters "to obtain" the Carter material. That mincing response is oot good enough for one who would be attorney general,

Mr. Meese's suitability might have been worth debating in terms of his opposition to civil rights and to legal equity for the poor. But his testimony has failed so far to dispel the most obvious suspicions raised by his confusion of public and personal business and his legalistic dance around the Carter papers. On the record as it now stands, Mr. Meese has not qualified for confirmation,

Unita Raises a Roadblock

The chief stumbling block is Unita, increasingly successful in its civil war with the Angolan government, which for its part has sought the protection of the Cubans. Only if the Cubans leave Angola will South Africa be prepared to allow elections in neighboring Namibia, where she is in conflict with Swapo. But bow can the Cubans go so long as Unita stays on the rampage?

much from South Africa's proposal, made Sunday, for a conference of all the governments and political movements involved. Such conferences can usually only be successful when wars have been lost or won and here the delineations of victory are not yet clear.

In ber recent invasion of Angola, South Africa may have frightened the Angolan government. Swapo, too, may have been cowed, even if its guerrillas continue to seep south-ward into Namibia, notwithstanding the alleged surveillance of the Angolan government.

But however pliable Angola and Swapo may be, the abiding stumbling block to an overall settlement, given the South African pre-condi-tion about Cuban troops, is Unita.

The Horror in the Gulf

It is now established beyond reasonable doubt that Iraq has been using chemical weap-ons against Iranian forces. This is a clear breach of the 1925 Geneva Protocol which forbids the use of chemical weapons, though not their production and storage.

Iraq has broken the protocol under great pressure. In a war that it started itself it is now fighting for its existence against waves of suicidal forces, often consisting of barely trained schoolchildren.

In such a foul and wasteful war between two almost equally unappealing sides it is difficult to find any criteria for deciding which carries the greater moral burden. Neither side has been ooticeably scrupulous on the battlefield, and many of the crimes committed by the Iranian regime against its own people are at least as horrible as those committed by Iraq

Nevertheless, sensibilities should not be so dulled as to inhihit expression of horror at the use of a particularly nasty form of weaponry. It is also important to condemn a major breach of one of the few international agreements on arms control that has been widely observed.

- The London Times. The real reason why Iran's Islamic leaders are so aggressive is that the second phase of their revolution entails exporting it. If Iraq could be defeated and a direct link with Syria established, Tehran's influence, and by consequence the Iranian concept of Islam, could be imposed on an area including the whole Le-

"Liberadon" of the Shiite shrine at Kerbela in Iraq could then, it is reasoned, be followed by the reconquest of Jerusalem.

- Neue Zürcher Zeitung (Zurich). Cheers for the Rising Yen

vant and Saudi Arabia.

The yen's rise against the dollar is good news for Japan's economy. What is happening is that the currency rate, which has been widely believed to be undervalued, is moving toward a more appropriate level reflecting the fundamental strength of the economy.

The good news means, first, that the dearer yen will go a long way toward reducing the large trade gap between Japan and the United States. The yen appreciation will also dispel any misunderstanding in America — if it still exists — that Japan's monetary authorities may be manipulating the yen rate to keep it artificially higher against the dollar — that this country may be mounting an export-drive with the belp of a rigged exchange rate.

1934: 'Izvestia' Writer Favors Pact

MOSCOW - The Russian newspaper "Izvestia" gives a cordial reception to the proposa for a general non-aggression pact under which each state would refrain from invading the territory of the other. A contributor to "Izves tia," who signs "Visitor," points out that such a treaty "would give depth to the Kellogg pact in the spirit both of President Roosevelt's appeal of last year and of the Soviet's definition of an aggressor" — as employed in the pacts which the U.S.S.R. signed in London last year with nine neighbors. "Visitor" adds, "We Communists, whom the imperialist press has accused many times of disrespect for treaties, in reality attach tremendous importance to treaties whose purpose is to strengthen peace."

Assad Not So Shrewd As He Might Appear

By G.H. Jansen

praised, more than ever, for what be is not — a shrewd tactician, a clever poker player and the leader of a regional superpower.

Moreover, he is not criticized for what be actually is - a brutal and unpopular dictator whose regime has created a society that is corrupt and acquisitive and the very antith-esis of the ideology of the Ba ath Socialist Party, on which the Assad regime is supposed to be founded.

The victories attributed to Syria - the abrogation of the May 17 agreement, the defeat of the Lebanese Army, the departure of the U.S. Marines — were won oo the field of battle in Beirut and the Chuf by young Lebanese Shias and Druze who were prepared to light and die: Without their courage and sacrifice, Syria could have achieved nothing on its own in Lebanon. Syria's greatest and cootinuing strength owes bittle to the policies of Mr. Assad' regime or any other Syrian government and everything to geography. Syria sits across the landward lines of communication in and out of Lebanon.

Though Syria's role in Lebanon since September 1983, when Israeli forces pulled back to the Awali rivsive and negative: to keep open the supply lines to the Shia and Druze militias. But once these local supporters win and eventually enter the government and then have the use of the ports and airports of Lebanon, they will cease to be dependent on the good will of the Syrians.

D AMASCUS — Now that President Amin Gemayel of Lebanon has decided to abrogate the May 17 troop-withdrawal agreement with Israel, the Syrian president, Hafez al-Assad, is being princer closing in on Syria. That is, a Shift fundamentalist regime being independence, even defiance, of Syria displayed by Nabih Berri, the Shiite leader. What womes them pincer closing in on Syria. That is, a Shiite fundamentalist regime being established in Lebanon on one side and on the other side in Iraq, if the current Iranian campaign in Iraq succeeds. Fundamentalist Shias abominate the secular and minority Alawite regime in Syria.

The "shrewd" Syrians have made many mistakes in Lebanon. There was the original blunder of sending in their army in 1976 to save the Maronites, who sooo thereafter turned against Syria. Having fought the Maronites, the Syrians are now having to build bridges to a Maro-nite president against the wishes of Syria's latest Lebanese allies, the Shias and Druze, whom the Syrians fought to defend the Maronites. Syria's divide-and-rule policy is becoming positively frenetic.

The biggest failure of Syrian policy was its attempt to dominate or destroy Yasser Arafat's independent leadership of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Though Mr. Arafat was pushed out of Lebanon, he emerged more strongly support-ed than ever by his people. This means that Syria has lost "the Palestinian card": It can no longer "deliver" the Palestinians in any regional peace oegotiations.

ance Syria, Mr. Arafat helped to bring Egypt, Syria's sworn enemy, back into the Islamie fold and soon back into the Arab family as well. Egypt's partial return has already brought into existence a strong, moderate Arab hloc. Because of its backing, Mr. Arafat has been able This process has begun. The Syri- to ignore Syrian threats and has talked to King Hussein of Jordan in Amman and has reached a basic reement between Jordan and the PLO on their future relations. The one thing Syria dreads is emerging as a possibility: a regional settle-ment that would leave her out in the cold and reduced to insignificance.

The Syrian leaders, who are cantions pragmatists, are not trying to pick a fight, and are oot vehemently anti-United States. Or even anti-Israel (They have to be cautious because their internal position is under constant threat). Thus they say openly that they will only consider fighting or negotiating with Israel when there is a balance of power between them and that, they admit, will come after many years. They no longer press their claim for the return of the occupied Golan Heights with any urgency. They do not want Israel to make any gains from its invasion of Lebanon, but they have said that Lebanoo can reach a oew agreement that would guarantee the security of the border and of oorthern Israel, which would be a gain for Israel.

The upside-down evaluation of Syria's position of strength and the exaggeration of its influence only proves that if any statement, however haseless, is repeated often enough, however imthinkingly, it will eventually be accepted at least as the conventional wisdom, and perhaps even as gospel truth.

The writer, a journalist who has covered Middle East politics for many years, contributed this comment to the Los Angeles Times.

The Rich and Powerful Also Flee the East Bloc

BRUSSELS—It is something like hearing leading Americans de-clare that Svetlana, Stalin's daughter, endangered detente by escaping with the help of the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi. After Ingrid Berg, niece of East German Prime Minister Willi Stoph, tried to seek haven in the West by taking her family with ber to the West German Embassy in Prague, Hans-Jochen Vogel, leader of the Social Democratic opposition in Bonn, criticized escapees who "use spectacular methods and threaten to millify the efforts of those who seek to leave through the normal procedure."

Philipp Jenninger, a junior minister in the Bonn government, said he believed that "transit through West German embassies in East English German embassies in East European countries could compromise Bonn's quiet efforts to reunite families."

But the Berg affair is special. It is too big for the cynical intra-German reaipolitik that describes the system of blackmail used to buy those East Germans who want to emigrate as a "normal procedure." This affair has another dimension.

It illustrates an important phenomenon, the flight of members of the nomenklatura. Mrs. Berg is not only the mece of the prime minister but also the daughter of Kurt Stoph, a former minister. She is the wife of an "independent artisan," which is East Germany's top social category.

The family has a Volvo car—which in East Germany costs five years of a high salary—and a house in a southeastern suburb of Berlin, all of which is enough to indicate that it was not the lack of financial opportunity that led ber and her family to run the risks they did in trying to escape. But they were not the first escapees of the privileged class from East Germany or other East European comtries. Preceding them, among East Germans, were Thomas Brash, the son of a deputy minister of culture, and Andreas Sindermann, grandson of Horst Sindermann, a former leading member of the government. Oleg Wolff, a nephew of Micha Wolff, the powerful head of East Germany's intelligence organization, tried to flee through Yugoslavia but was caught. And then there are others: the

Mitterrand Even Asks About Hart

By Flora Lewis

ARIS - President François Mit. terrand is preparing for a weeklong coast-to-coast visit to the United States this month. Like everybody else here, the first thing he asks an American visitor is about Gary Hart. What are his chances? What is he like? The name is new to the French

The confusion and uncertainty of a U.S. presidential campaign always disturb Europeans, who follow a different calendar. Mr. Mitterrand is in serious trouble with French voters now, but his first big test comes only in 1986 with legislative elections. His own mandate runs until 1988.

So be is trying to think longer-term, to plan with patience and ride out this difficult year when America is arguing about its leadership, the Soviets are consolidating another power team, the European Commu-nity is unraveling at the seams and wars big and little are roiling the Middle East.

The issues have not changed much from his previous meetings with President Reagan. He no longer seems to expect to budge Washington, so he is looking toward an exchange of impressions, a talk about the state of the world, not much more.

Mr. Mitterrand has dug in on Lebanon, despite French criticism for keeping troops in Beirut. He recognizes that Lebanon has been a serious setback for the West, but he does not intend to blame the United States or offer advice on what to do now, France must remain in Lebanon be says, to help ease the coming transition. He wants good political relations, after the troops leave, with all factions in the fighting. The effort has already begun to pay off. Persistent, quiet contact with the Shiite leader, Nabih Berri, has led to arrangements for the Amal militia to protect the French in their exposed positions. This is an irony, since the U.S. and European forces were sent to protect the Lebanese and Palestinians from each other. But Mr. Mitterrand's point is that outsiders have to work is agreement with all the Lebanese.

He does oot want to pull out without an accord with President Amin Gemayel. The key to limiting damage for the West, he thinks, is to avoid a sense of abandonment and to sup-port continuity in the evolving ad-justment of power. Mr. Mitterrand feels it is important not to let the situation appear as the end of an era but only as a shifting passage.

Mr. Mitterrand considers the Iran-Iraq war extremely dangerous. He does oot think either side wants to shut off the flow of oil, but events could whirlwind out of cootrol.

France continues to honor its spe-cial contracts with Iraq, made in differeot circumstances by then Premier Jacques Chirac in 1976. It makes France supplier of about a third of Irag's arms, with the Russians sup-plying the rest. Beyond that, the pres-ident sees little to be done to prevent a victory hy either side.

Unlike previous presidents of the Fifth Republic, Mr. Mitterrand is not an avid launcher of foreign policy initiatives. He says he is ready to talk to the Russians, but they are busy with internal problems now. He will go to Moscow if there is no obstacle. as be put it, but he just doesn't know whether it is likely to be this year.

He is convinced that the Russians do want to resume arms control negotiations with the United States, possi bly in a different context, merging various issues of disarmament. But he is not optimistic about results. He would like to see a treaty banning all weapons in space, but he thinks France and Europe have to look ahead and join the space race because disarmament is getting nowhere.

Space is becoming a talisman among French political leaders. Their eyes shine when they talk of it as the great challenge, the test of Europe's ability to keep up in the world and the source of inspiration for a new spurt of energy and independence.

They do got seem to consider the costs, and the choices that would have to be neglected, if they decide on a European manned space platform, which Mr. Mitterrand has enthusiastically proposed. It sounds like political poetry, a kind of desperate hope that space will distract the French from their peeves and Europeans from quarrels about the price of milk and tomatoes, infusing a new spirit of community. In sum, the ontlook from the Elysée Palace is bemused, aware of how limited are the means for diverting the pressures of tension in the world, concerned with stability, trying not to aggravate friction.

One Way to Be a 'Lord of the Manor'

By Gregory Jensen

ONDON - Those who bid high enough will be-L COMPON — Those who the man or, bearers of genuine titles more than 1,000 years old. Robert Smith, 37, is selling 49 lordships of the manor today in an auction that he considers to be the largest ever this century.

There is no trick. Anyone spending up to £6,500 (about $10,000) to the auction can become, for example, the Lord of the Manor of Mountneys and Dagworth, or Hon Charsfield or Beeston or Kilgwrrog.

"These are all ancient titles," Smith said recently. "I don't think there are any of them later than the Conquest" — of 1066, when William, duke of Normandy conquered England. But lords of the manor aren't what they used to be. Today, says the sales catalog, "the purchase of a Lordship, in addition to potential manorial rights, entitles the owner to call him or herself the Lord of the Manor." That's about all. A manor is what it has always been - not a house but a plot of land, originally granted to someone by the king. In feudal times the lord of the manor owned

But Smith is not selling land or houses or plots of ground. Lordships no longer mean real estate ownership, and manors these days are little more than a geographic definition.

Still, the manorial system is one of Britain's few direct survivors from feudal times, a system "at least 1,500 years old," Smith said.

"Manors go back to Saxon times, and lordships have been bought and sold down the centuries," said Smith, a historian who has made a career of boying

"They're like any property. They are bought and Versace, who started working on it a few seasons ago. His best ideas of Women's Wear Daily, and she and the Cubist ones, the latter stars opposite Michael Caine to girls into so many man-eaters.

of Great Tey and Tollesbury Hall, of Ditton Camoys or Rockwells Wiggpitts and Coggeshall, the manors are located in 12 counties in England and Wales. Each title gives any new lord the right to have a coat of arms — plus "all sorts of extraneous little rights which don't mean much these days in money terms," Smith said. These rights vary, but can include rights to "commons and wastes"—to franchises for markets or fairs or to mineral excavation. Smith buys and sells about 50 lordships a year, aside from auctions like this one. He knows who owns each of the 20,000-odd manors in England and Wales. "A lot of them are still owned by the aristocracy," he said. The owners bring him lordship titles to sell.

So up for auction go such lordships as Rough Close. Attleburgh Chanticlers, Whytes Tyells in Buttsbury, Byng Hall in Pettistree and Mavison in Thrandeston. With most of the titles go documents, some of startling antiquity. A court roll of King Edward I, written on parchment about 700 years ago, is one of many being sold with the Lordship of Craffield "Very few documents of such age are left to private hands,

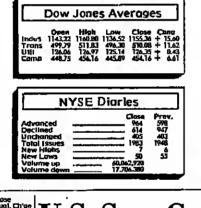

With the Lordship of Bovey Tracey goes a metal chest overflowing with stiff, crinkling parchments, tracing the manor's rent records since 1700.

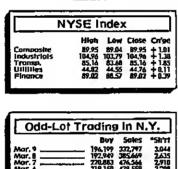

"Besides the title, it's the manorial documents you're really buying." Smith said. Documents like a 1642 marriage contract, or an "inquisition" into ma-norial rights under Elizabeth I. Most of these are so valuable as local history that English law prevents them being taken out of the country.

"That's one reason wby most buyers of lordships are English," Smith said. "There is indeed interest among Americans and Germans, and we get letters from all over the world. But it's a long step between interest and the actual payment of cash." Smith's company, Manorial Research, and his joint auctioneer, Strutt and Parker, are holding the auction in London in the Merchant Taylor's Hall on Threadneedle Street. Smith said he expected lordship titles. alone to sell for about £3,500 and those with doct-

WASHINGTON — U.S. husinesses plan to increase capital spending 12 percent this year, the largest increase in 18 years, the Commerce Department reported Monday.

The 12-percent planned increase, adjusted for inflation, contrasts to a 3.8-percent decline in 1983. It would be the sharpest increase since a 13.4-percent jump in 1966 and would put capital spending at a record 5343.6 billion in actual dollars.

The 12-percent increase would be the first rise in three years. An earlier survey of husinesses in January estimated the 1984 increase at 9.4 percent. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige attributed the increase to a "thriving economy," that "has encouraged firms to raise their capital-spending plans for 1984."

Mr. Baldrige said said that by the end of the year, capital spending would be 18 percent higher than it was at the trough of the recession.

Inflation-adjusted spending increased 3.9 percent in the fourth quarter of 1983, and the Commerce Department's survey predicted a similar increase in the first quarter of 1984 and a 0.4-percent rise in the second quarter.

In the survey, manufacturers said they expect sales to increase 11.5 percent in 1984, compared with a 7.5-percent increase in 1983.

S&P's 100 Index Options Are Unparalleled Success

By H.J. MAIDENBERG

New York Times Service

EW YORK - From the day the Standard & Poor's 100 index options started trading on the Chicago Board Options Exchange March 11, 1983, the new market became a phenomenon for several reasons.

For one, no other options or futures have become so popular in so brief a time as the S&P 100, originally named the CBOE 100 and now known in the trade by its ticker symbol OEX. Last Wednesday, for example, a record 342,297 OEX contracts changed hands, eclipsing the previous mark of 320,529 trades set on Feb. 9. Its daily average volume this year has been 224,000 contracts.

As another example, last Wednesday the New York Futures Exchange's options on its parent's composite index traded 26,581 contracts and the American Stock Exchange's Major Market Index, 22,994.

Also typical, the most active futures market last Wednes-day was in Treasury bonds on the Chicago Board of Trade, where 195,000 contracts were traded, as well as 22,520 Treasury-bond options. Significantly, the volume of the S&P 500 index futures on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange that day was 59,289.

"There are several ready explanations for the OEX phenomenon, which is unparalleled in the history of the options or futures markets," said John M. Blin, partner in Shatkin Investing Inc., Chicago, and a former economics professor at Northwestern "One reason is that the OEX index of 100 stocks contains 80

ercent of the richest, or most heavily capitalized, shares in the S&P 500 index, against which the investment performance of most institutional portfolio managers are measured."

Another reason, Mr. Blin said, was that many portfolio managers now believe they have found the "handle" that permits them to project the overall stock market's moves a few minutes before the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks confirms them.

As he explained: "The fact is that IBM has become the anchor around which the market moves. So 'rich' is IBM that any price change in its stock will greatly include the popular share averages immediately. Because the OEX has only 100 stocks, including IBM is recorded accomplant forms the other contents. including IBM, it responds somewhat faster than the other averages. Since the breakup of AT&T, IBM has become, for better or worse, the believther issue."

By "richest," Mr. Blin meant that no other stock is as heavily capitalized as International Business Machines Corp., which has 609 million shares outstanding. At last Friday's IBM close of 108, these shares were worth almost $65.8 billion.

According to his researchers, IBM represents 12.5 percent of the value of the OEX options; 6.5 percent of the S&P 500 index; 4 percent of the Big Board's composite index, and 9 percent of the Amex Market Value Index.

Because the Dow Jones industrial and Value Line averages are termed "democratic" in that all shares are weighed equally, IBM's price represents one-thirtieth of the Dow and carries as much clout as the cheapest over-the-counter stock in the Value

Still another reason the OEX has become a sort of early warning indicator of how the other averages will move is the volatility of the shares in this index. All the OEX blue-chip stocks are constantly being traded, while the broader-based indexes contain many less-active issues or those that trade infrequently.

Stewart C. Elner, vice president and director of options trading the OEX options:

"Aside from the technical factors that have made the OEX the most successful product anyone can think of, we must remember that it was the first of its kind and from its first day enjoyed the expertise and liquidity of the CBOE, the first stock options market. Copycat products rarely do as well as the first one off the

He said that the OEX options have also benefited from changes that have been sweeping the equities market. "Investors today do not think long term," he continued. "That is why the stock options grew so popular. Now, many investors think in even shorter day-to-day terms and this may explain the incredible OEX index option market. It may also explain why the stock options volumes on the CBOE and Amex both declined 2.7 percent in 1983, a year of rising share prices."

Jack Lavery, Merrill Lynch economist, who predicted a slight credit tightening by the Federal Reserve, heartened some investors by forecasting that the economy would slow to a more sustainable pace. Also, Mr. Lavery and a few other analysis predicted that the Reagan administration and Congress would overcome political ob-stacles to work cut the federal budget deficit a bit.

Some Bankers in U.S. Less Optimistic Latin American Debt Crisis Is Ending

By Robert A. Bennett

New York Times Service NEW YORK -Some bankers in the United States are no longer as optimistic that the Latin American debt crisis is working itself out. Their new fears are based on a change in the nature of the problem. In the past, major debtor countries were not meeting their obligations simply because they did not have the money. But in recent months, at least two countries have stopped paying interest on debts even though they apparently have the foreign exchange to do so.

Argentina, which is about $3 billion behind in terest payments, is estimated to have at least $1 billion in foreign exchange. And Veneznela is estimated to have $11 billion to $15 billion in foreignexchange reserves. These holdings are the result of austerity programs that have decreased the demand for imports and encouraged exports.

The two countries are reluctant to use that painfully carned foreign exchange to pay foreign banks. Instead, they have indicated that they will use the money to stimulate economic development.

This fundamental change is having a profound effect on the international financial system. Some bankers fear that it could unravel much of the progress IBM, which last week boosted its of the past year, during which cooperation among the stake in Intel to 18.8 percent, lenders and borrowers, their governments and such institutions as the International Monetary Fund have kept the global financial system intact.

The new atmosphere is making it more difficult for major banks to persuade smaller banks around the world to participate in loans to other Latin American countries, such as Mexico and Brazil, that have shown substantial progress. And it is those loans that have been been enabling the borrowers to meet their debtservice obligations and to continue financing muchneeded imports.

An even more serious concern is that a bank somewhere in the world might decide to declare a debtor country in default, and attempt to seize the country's commercial assets in other countries, such as bank accounts, ships and airplanes. Every creditor bank would have to take similar action to protect itself, thus placing all of the country's loans in default.

"At some point, some hothead somewhere in the world is going to do something foolish," said a New York banker. "This is a very explosive situation." It is conceiveable, be said, that a large bank with a relatively small exposure in Latin America might declare a default to weaken competitors that have proportionately greater exposure

Banks with large write-offs, weak earnings and relatively small capital accounts would be stymied in their growth, while others with smaller Latin American exposures and stronger capital bases could move ahead more quickly.

What is making the bankers particularly nervous is the approach of the end of the first quarter. Because much of Argentina's interest payments is expected to be more than 90 days in arrears at the end of March, it seems almost certain that the earnings of several major banks will be significantly reduced. Under U.S. law, loans on which interest is past-due 90 days or longer must be considered a nonperforming asset. Interest on nonperforming loans cannot be counted until it is paid. Ordinarily, interest payments are made quarterly and banks keep accruing interest even before nonperforming asset. Not only can the bank not accrue interest for that quarter on such loans, but it also must deduct from the current quarter's profits interest on the loan that had been accrued previously. Because of Argentina's actions, analysts estimate that first-quarter earnings of Manufacturers Hanover Corp. and Citicorp might be reduced $24 million or more, and that J.P. Morgan & Co. and Chase Manhattan Corp. also might experience declines. But some bankers remain confident that the crisis.

Oil-Merger Rush Stirs Criticism

Moratorium Sentiment Grows After Mobil-Superior Pact

By Mark Ports

Washington Post Service WASHINGTON — Mobil Corp.'s plans for a $5.7-billion takeover of Superior Oil Co. engendered new support in Congress Monday for a moratorium on mergers involving major oil compa-

Mobil Corp. disclosed Sunday that it had agreed to buy 22 percent of Superior Oil Co. from the founding Keck family and that it would offer the company's remaining stockholders the same price, $45 a share, or a total of $5.7 billion.

The chairman of Standard Oil Co. of California said Monday that a moratorium on mergers would cause "chaos" for his company's planned $13.2-billion takeover of Gulf Corp.

Senator J. Bennett Johnston, a Democrat of Louisiana, has introduced legislation calling for a sixmonth moratorium on mergers among the 50 largest U.S. oil com-panies. And Senator Howard M. Metzenbaum, an Ohio Democrat, said he was looking for an appropriate bill to attach a similar amendment in the Senate.

Anti-merger legislation has also been introduced in the House. And several House and Senate committees have scheduled hearings into mergers, beginning with a Senate Judiciary Committee bearing scheduled for Thursday.

Mr. Johnston and Mr. Metzenbanm have been the leaders of a Senate movement in the past two weeks favoring a halt to the oil industry's merger activity, and ear-lier measures introduced by them were defeated. But Mr. Metzenbaum said Mobil's action "increases the sense of urgency." In addition to the Mobil-Superior and Socal-Gulf agreements, Texaco Inc. has agreed to huy Get-Oil Co. for $10.1 billion, the Dutcb-British consortium that owns most of Shell Oil Co. offered to pay $5.8 billion for the rest, and Texaco, forestalling another possi-ble takeover, paid $1.3 billion for a 9.8-percent block of its stock to the Bass family of Texas. Wall Street, which last week was gressional action against mergers that the price of Gulf stock fell considerably below Socal's $80-ashare offer, continued cautious Gulf was up $1.375 to $66.50. Socal was unchanged at $34.50. So-so wary of the possibility of cooperior was up 25 cents to $39.50. Mobil fell 50 cents to $29.75. "I think the Mobil-Superior deal is going to create further pressure" on Congress, a professional stock trader said. The possibility of a freeze on oil mergers has brought the top executives of several oil companies to Washington to lobby. Monday, be-fore going to a series of meetings on Capitol Hill, George M. Keller, So-cal's chairman, defended his company's merger plans and those of the rest of the industry. "I think what we've come up with ... is an arrangement that will give us a stronger company," Mr. Keller said in an interview. "We're borrowing the money for known resources and then consolidating the opportunity that this presents for future development.

"Two words have come together kind of like 'Damn Yankees,' and they're 'Big Oil.' Sure we're big. But we have to be big to compete."

Senate opponents of the merger activity argue that the companies in the oil business are already big enough. In a letter to his colleagues, Mr. Johnston wrote: The end result of this activity will be fewer and bigger oil companies. They will be much more in debt, and will have less money for finding new oil and gas wells."

His bill would delay the Socal-Gulf and Mobil-Superior mergers but not affect the Texaco-Getty agreement, because, he said, it has already cleared government antitrust approval.

James E. Lee, chairman of Gulf, described said a moratorium would be "the worst of both worlds." They suggested that if the merger was blocked, it might clear the way for T. Boone Pickens Jr. to resume his assault on Gulf. Mr. Pickens and a group of investors led by Mesa Petroleum Co. last week ex-tended their $65-a-share offer for 8.2 percent of Gulf until March 20, apparently betting that Congress would act to stop the merger.

Clyde V. Prestowitz, a counselor for Japanese affairs in the Commerce Department, said Sunday the agreement in principle would allow U.S. officials to attend the meetings of the various industry advisory councils as participants. The two active levels of participation in the councils are expert witness or member, with the latter participating fully in the deliberations.

The accord, which was championed by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone over the often-vigorous opposition of government and inustrial leaders, could give Americans much of the same type of access to the legislative process that Japanese lobbyists have in the U.S. Congress.

Aides here stressed, however, that the exact nature of the U.S. participation likely would not be known for many months. But participation in the councils would give Americans a better understanding of the workings of Japanese industrial policy, which has been a source of trade friction between the two countries. LONDON — A group of inves-tors led by Sir James Goldsmith, the British financier and casino owner, said Monday that it had agreed to sell its 8.6-percent stake in St. Regis Corp. for $159 million.

The sale to the New York-based U.S. forest-products, insurance and energy company will produce a profit of about $50 million for the group, which bought just over three million St. Regis shares early last month. As part of the sale, the group agreed not to make further purchases of St. Regis securities. A source close to the group said Monday that it had intended to be a long-term investor in St. Regis but that the company came up with "a very fair offer for the shares. The purchase of the shares last

Now Tyndall Bank offers you an easy way of earning higher interest on US dollar deposits whilst retaining complete access to your savings at all times. Tyndali's new Dollar Money Account enables expatriates and other overseas residents to benefit from rates of interest normally only available to major investors in the London money market. In addition the dollar account offers the following

- Security deposits are placed with major recognised banks in the UK or their wholly owned subsidiaries. High interest — paid gross without deduction of tax.
- Your own dollar cheque book minimises correspondence, simplifies transfers and direct payments, and gives you access to your funds at all times.
- Interest credited four times a year means an even higher return because interest is earned on the tolerest.
   The current rate, if maintained, equals 9.30% p.a.
- No reports to any government authority for non-residents of the Isle of Man.

Tyndall Bank (Isle of Man) Limited is licensed under the Manx Banking Act 1975. The Tyndall Group is one of the leading investment management groups in the U.K. and is wholly owned by Globe Investment Trust P.L.C. Funds managed within the Globe Group exceed £1,000 million.

NEW YORK — The water table

NEW YORK — The water table in New York City has risen as much as 10 feet (three meters) during the last 30 years, croding some subway tunnels so badly that they may have to be rebuilt, transit officials have reported.

The Transit Authority is pumping more than 13 million gallons (49.4 million liters) of water a day from the system, officials said Friday, but parts of the roadbed are neverthless soaking in water.

In the last 10 years, the authority has spent about $50 million has spent about $50 millioo stalling pumps and building sewer lines to steer water away from the tracks, officials said. But the water has continued to be a frequent cause of service disruptions.

Calls Grow to Tighten Controls on Swiss Banks

By Brij Klandaria

GENEVA - The major Swiss banks posted record profits in 1983 but have failed to disarm critics trying to clip the banks' wings with legislation tightening controls on commercial banking.

Recent allegations in France of illegal account holders in Switzerland have been discounted as "sheer fantasy" by the Caisse d'Epargne of Geneva. But they have added to nervousness in boardrooms about the troubled image of Swiss banking.

Union Bank of Switzerland, implicated in similar disclosures in Paris last September, is buying fullpage advertisements in local newspapers to explain the oeed for across its frontiers. Union Bank of banking secrecy.

The Socialist Party and a private Swiss group monitoring financial links with Third World nations have attacked television advertisements approved by the Swiss Bankers' Association that suggest that banking secrecy provides oo pro-tection for criminals.

Opponents claimed in a formal complaint to the Swiss Communications Ministry that such secrecy is bad because it is lifted only for acts that are criminal under Swiss laws, provided that the foreign government has a prior aid agreement with Switzerland.

A rising share of foreign business, including fiduciary management of private and institutional funds for foreigners, has made the banks much more sensitive to charges of washing the dirty linen of others.

WASHINGTON - Attorney

General William French Smith Mooday defended the decisions of the Antitrost Division in two recent steel-merger cases and said the Justice Department would not be swayed by criticism from other Reagan administration officials.

Steel Move

In a written statement, Mr. Smith tried to deflect renewed criticism of the Justice Department from Commerce Secretary Maicolm Baldrige. In an article in Sunday's New York Times, Mr. Baldrige called the department's decision Feb. 15 to block the merger of LTV Corp. and Republic Steel Corp. "a world-class mistake for the United States."

Mr. Baldrige said the department had built "a legal model of a fairyland world" by refusing to count European and Japanese steel imports in its evaluation of the market affected by the merger.

Assistant Attorney General J. Paul McGrath, head of the Antitrust Division, has said Reagan administration guidelines prevented counting the foreign steel. He said quotas and voluntary restraints would keep those countries from increasing their imports of low-cost increases by domestic steelmakers.

U.S. Steel and National Steel Corp. called off a $575-million merger proposal Friday with criticism of Mr. McGrath. Officials of both companies said talks with Mr. out of $75 billion of imported McGrath had convinced them that printed materials in 1981. The he would try to block the proposal. The EC countered that the U.S. regulation violated GATT provisions that specifically forbid import bans or curbs and disciminatory practices under which imports are allowed from some countries but not from others. The EC charged discrimination because the regulation permits imports from

In 1982, the U.S. Congress overruled a presidential veto of an extension of the regulation until July 1, 1986, provoking the EC's complaint to GATT. Attempts to repeal the law or greatly reduce its scope met with stiff resistance from U.S. printers and legislators.

The law was enacted in 1891 to prevent U.S. authors from using the then overwhelmingly strong European printing industry to import their printed works back into the United States.

The clause's scope was reduced in various later amendments and a 1976 change set July 1, 1982, as a final expiration date. That date was extended by Congress, overriding objections by President Ronald Reagan after he had returned the bill to Congress unsigned.

Monitoring Group Says Fed's Policy Is Inflationary The Associated Press

NEW YORK - The Federal Reserve Board s pursuing a short-sighted monetary policy, which will likely result in higher rates of inflation, a group of economists that regularly monitors Fed policy-making said Monday.

The Fed has decided to concentrate on steadying short-term interest rates, the group said, while money-supply growth proceeds at "an erratic, unplanned rate" that is consistent with its own announced targets "only by

"Inflatioo is coming back," the co-chairman, Allan Meltzer of Carnegie-Melloo University of Pittsburgh, said Sunday as the group worked on

The self-appointed group, which calls itself he Shadow Open Market Committee, also criticized fiscal policy, saying Coogress and the Reagan administration are attaching an inordinate amount of importance to reducing the size of the federal budget deficit for oext fiscal year.

The group said that while it may be helpful to cut the budget deficit, it is more important to curb the government's growing obligation to pay for health care, retirement and defense programs of the future. The group said the growth of this longer-term liability for pro-grams oo which payment is not yet due must be curbed to free funds for investment and capital formation.

"Concern about fiscal policy should not focus on the oarrow issue of the deficit," the group said in its draft report. "The more important issue is the way resources are used."

The economists making up the group are known as mooetarists, who believe the quantity of money determines the level of economic activity and prices. The group derives its name from the Fed's policy-making arm, the Federal Open Market Committee.

Mr. Meltzer is co-chairman with Karl Brunoer of the University of Rochester, and other members include Jerry Jordan, former member of President Ronald Reagan's Council of Economic Advisers and oow a faculty member at nomic Advisers and oow a faculty member at the University of New Mexico, and Burton Zwick, vice president of Prudential Insurance Co. of America.

Co. of America.

In its draft report, the group said the Fed has decided to make keeping the interest rate on bank reserves in a narrow range a main tool of its monetary policy.

The policy, the group said, has resulted in the Fed permitting higher rates of growth in the money supply than are appropriate for curbing inflation. It said the U.S. monetary base, which includes currency and bank reserves, is growing at an annual rate of 9 percent, several points higher than the 6 percent to 7 percent that the Shadow Committee had recommended last fall.

Continuation of the recent rates of growth, the group said, will bring inflation back to the the group said, will bring inflation back to the "average levels of the 1970s" when rates soared to double digits.

KILLINGS

By Calvin Trillin. 231 pp. $14.95. Ticknor & Fields, 383 Orange St. New Haven, Conn. 06511.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

REPORTERS love murders," says Calvin Trillin, and so does the public. There are those who think that the only newspaper headline that sells better than murder is a disaster, in which out one but a large number of people are "murdered" by fate, or by life itself. A murder is both an intimate and a distant way of confronting our fascination with death. It's the most brutal form of what Geoffrey Gorer called "the pornography of "Killings" is a collection of reports on recent murders and trials in small towns around the country. Trillin, who is known for his pieces in The New Yorker and The Nation, seems to be interested in murders for reasons quite differ-ent from what we would expect. He's attracted not by their sensationalism, but by their obscurity, by the appalling insufficiency of the motives behind them.

Is this all it takes to get oneself killed? he seems to be asking. Is life really so precarious? Most of these victims fall "as apples fall, without astronomy," as Wallace Stevens put it. There's a pitful lack of drama, even of passion in the murders reconsted here. in the murders recounted here.

Just before he dies, a young man who has been gunned down by his closest friend says, "You shot me, you rat." Another dying man says to his killer, pointing out how arbitrarily be has behaved, "Why did you have to do that?" In several cases, the killing seems inadvertent, as if the killer didn't actually want to do it, but couldn't think of any other way to pass through the situation. Lack of imagingpass through the situation. Lack of imagina-tion may be a motive.

After a man shot a stranger who was taking photographs on his property, it emerged dur-ing the trial that the killer had once built a house for his future bride and that this bouse had remained empty, its furniture still in crates, for 30 years. It was not known whether this man had been rejected by a prospective wife or whether he had failed in propose to any woman — but either eventuality might bave "explained" his shooting a stranger.

When a prosperous lawyer was shot to death in Miami Beach, observers elaborated an inge-nious theory to explain the murder. The lawyer, who had a very controlled and unemotional manner in the courtroom, had been handling a case for some Cubans. When he lost the case, his Latin clients assumed from his quiet manner that be had not tried very hard and punished him for his alleged negligence. Despite its plausibility, this explanation seems a long way around to a death.

Trillin is interested not only in murders, he says, but in trials as well. A trial is "a process in which the person being asked a question actu-ally has to answer it." While the accused doesn't always have to tell the truth, his answer cannot be casual. It must involve a considerable effort. Even if it should be a fiction, it's produced under pressure, there's a lot at stake.

And the specificity of the unswer contains an element of drama that is often absent from ordinary speech.

Not just the accused, but a way of life is on trial in a small-town courtroom. Does a particular style of behavior lead to sudden death? How valuable was the life that was lost? Sever. al of the accused pleaded insanity, and this at of the accused pleaded instally, and this raised the question of the difference between insanity and anger. A trial is a cruel look into people's lives — lives that might never have been exposed, that might be just as awful as the maimed body of the deceased.

When an entire Laotian family tried to commit suicide in a small town io low where they had been resettled, quite a few well-meaning people felt guilty. Did we insult them, they asked themselves, by offering to do their laundry in our machines? Is it impossible to live without a common language? What was their attempted suicide saying?

Murder, as Trillin sees it, makes a small town more serious for a while. People are chastened reminded of causality, a bit sur-prised at being alive. The word motive lovers for a few days in their minds. Perhaps some of them ask themselves whether they could provoke, or commit, a killing,

What Trillin does so well, what makes "Killings" literature, is the way he pictures the lives that were interrupted by the murders. They glare — not so much with publicity as with iocompleteness. They are like the rhetorical trope known as aposiopesis: a breaking off for effect, as in a sentence deliberately left unfinished. Even the most ordinary life makes a terrible noise, an effect, when it's broken off.

Canadian Boxer Ready To Make Olympic Move

By Michael katz New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Willie deWit drew the line at 20 degrees below (minus 29 Celsius). It gets a lot colder in Grande Prairie, Alberta, sometimes 50 or 60 below.

"Even the dogs don't like to run when it gets that cold," said deWit, who was passing through New York recently without an overcost. long as it doesn't get below that.
You get used to it. Just bundle up."
The boxing world may find it easy to get used to deWit, an amiable 6-foot-2½-inch (1.98-meter), blond-haired, blue-eyed Canadian who does not have the usual back-ground of a boxer.

He is the world amateur heavyweight champion and a favorite for a gold medal at the Los Angeles men's Association. And he has been boxing fewer than five years. He was taught to box by a dentist in backyards in Grande Prairie and Beaver Lodge, towns 20 miles apart about 320 miles north of Edmonton. He is conditioned by a former ring disciple of Idi Amin.

No Canadian boxer has won a inch in the last year (six years ago, medal in the Olympics since Lefty Guinn of Toronto took a gold in will remain in the 201-pounder). He was a scrawny 130-pounder). # Field of 53 Set for NCAA Championship

Paul and Kentucky were made the strength of this year's tournament top regional seeds Sunday for the could be the best ever. Sunday for the could be the best ever. Sunday for the could be the best ever. Paul and Kentucky were made the top regional seeds Sunday for the upcoming National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament, while three major conferences took the lion's share of the invitations.

The biggest controversy of the selections may center on moving each region look awfully, awfully Georgetown, a Washington D.C., tough." Gaviti said Sunday school, to the West. The Hoyas are the Big East champions and were invitations.

"North Carolina has been No. 1 all year," Gaviti explained. "They only two defeats. It would have been overreaction to seed North Carolina anywhere but in the East."

Thirteen of the tournament's 53 teams - almost 25 percent of the field — hail from the Atlantic Coast, Southeastern and Big East conferences. The Southeastern and Big East conferences each placed four teams,

Missing from among the ACC's live entries, however, is North Carolina State. Last year's winner of the collegiate championship wound up with a 19-13 record and became the first defending champions not invited back since Michigan State failed to make a return appearance

North Carolina State was among 32 teams selected for the National Invitation Townsment.

North Carolina, ranked No. 1 in both wire service polls, was in-stalled as the NCAA's top Eastern Region seed, while second-ranked Georgetown was shipped off to be the top seed in the West.

Fourth-ranked DePaul is the top seed in the Midwest and No.3 Kentucky is the first seed in the Mideast. The top regional seeds get first-round byes.

U.S. Will Auction Trafficker's Haul

N EW YORK — The U.S. government plans March 24 to auction a $1-million collection of Tiffany works amassed by a marijuana dealer.

The collection was seized under the 1970 Controlled Substances Act as the assets of Barry W. Toombs, who is serving a 15-year prison term on charges of racketeering and possession of 30,000 pounds (13,600 kilos) of marijuana.

The more than 270 lamps, glass, mosaics, enamels and metalwork by Louis Comfort Tiffany will be auctinned for the Treasury at Sotheby's in New York.

Theology Harvey Cox, Who Once Bemoaned the Decline of Religion, Takes a Look at Resurgence of Christian Groups in the U.S.

By Henry Mitchell Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — Harvey Cox wrote a book on the decline of the Christian religion and now has written another one on the resurgence of it and what it means, sort Cox, professor of divinity at Harvard University, is a white-haired, blue-eyed man with a rosy complexion, a ready smile and what some would call a highly optimistic nature. "We can talk about sex now," he said, "and maybe we can soon talk about religion. Maybe it doesn't have to be bushed up any more." He thinks the American effort to keep any breath of religion out of schools, and out of politics, is a pendulum that has swung too far.

"I am not talking here about prayer in schools, but I'd like to see something taught so that students are not completely ignorant of religion," he said. He foresees trouble (collapse, in a nutshell) in what he calls modern theology, by which he means the accommodation of religion to the secular world.

In its place be foresees a different sort of religion, the form of which is not yet clear, except that it will have little to do with the 200-odd denominations of Christian churches now in existence.

"And the change will come, or is coming, from the bottom and from the edges of society," be went on. For example, the Moral Majority and the Christian-base groups of Central America, East Germany and Asia These are groups in which people study the Bible together, share meals and discuss life, often devising novelties in liturgy. Some of these groups, within established denominations, have been opposed by the parent de-nomination. The Roman Catholic Church, he observes, has feared for orthodoxy in some of these base groups.

Such ventures, he said, do not arise at the major theological centers but among people, not necessarily unsophisticated or uneducated or poor (though many are) but always dissatisfied with religion as they have known it in the so-called mainline denominations.

Well," you might remind him of the obvious, "Christianity did not begin in the fields of the Greek philosophers, but in the boon-

"When people get together, as they increas-ingly will, to discuss religion from the point of Calvin, from the point of Aquinas, from many other points, I do not think there has to be a donnybrook." "We do not have to remain stuck at the point of the past where the best thing seemed to be the utter separation of religion from public life."

If you suggest to him that one man's reli-gion is another man's pagan evil, he acknowl-edges the commonplace.

Cox grew up a Baptist in Malvern, Pennsylvania, where he went to work for 40 cents an hour trimming grass about graves, a job he managed to get through the influence of his grandfather, chairman of the cemetery board.

A good place, he said, to think about ultimate things, and not noisy, either. He said he felt rather guilty getting the job through in-fluence in this way, but was reminded that when the gift is trifling (40 cents an hour, indeed) the guilt need not be excessive. He says that just as there were many false starts, many charlatans and scoundrels in the reform movements of the 16th century (and vet reform moved ahead) so there may be false starts and plenty of charlatans and idiots in the religion of tomorrow, which he calls the theology of the postmodern world, but which will come into being all the same. With Cox you can argue all you like about the past tensions and the donnybrooks, to use his word, that sprang from enthusiasts of He agrees religion can be a force for evil as well as for good, and he agrees it has been U.S. policy since the 18th century to keep religion on the sidelines, not because people are indifferent to religion, but because they care too much and tend to get into fights His book does not discuss birth control, abortion, homosexuality, public prayer, pornography, geology, the origin of species and other topics of religious controversy, nor review such religious communities as the late Jim Jones's venture in Guyana in which more than 900 people killed themselves with cyanide in pursuance of their religious convic-

Strong religious convictions exist, however, on various sides of such questions, and in the past it has been thought best to keep the secular state in one compartment and religion in another — and private — compartment, mewhat like sex.

He does not judge what is good or bad in religious movements. His aim is to point out the surprising upsurge of religion — in Iran, in Lynchburg, in Soviet Russia, in East Germany, in Poland, among Roman Catholic bishops and their views on nuclear war, and in Central America and Brazil. Some of the movements may be called conservative (the Moral Majority) and some may be called radical leftist (Central America) but there are structural points in common in many of

In any case, he argues, the point is that just about the time everybody got used to the general collapse of religion as a force of consequence in the secular world, religion began surging.
"And the thing is, whatever one thinks of it, it is not going away."

conversations, said he should have destroyed the Watergate tapes, TV Guide magazine reports. Nixon made the remarks during 21/2 hours of videotaped interviews to be aired in the next six weeks on CBS, which purchased them for about $500,000, the magazine said Sunday. The interviews were conducted by Frank Gamon, a Nixon White House staffer who worked on the former president's memoirs. Nixon, who resigned midway through his second term on Aug. 9. 1974, said other presidents taped people without their knowledge, adding be discovered President Lyndon Johnson had microphones outside his office "so he could listen to what people were saying about him before they came in-side." About the Watergate break-in itself. Nixon said it "was wrong. stupidly handled, and should have been attacked. Nixon also discussed the media in the interviews. "They say it's the responsibility of the media to look at government especially at the president - with a microscope. I don't argue with that, hut when they use a proctoscope it's going too far."

"The U.N. is an intricate charade," says Charles Lichenstein, 57. who has left his post as alternate U.S. representative to the U.N. to be a senior fellow at the Heritage Foundation in Washington. Lichenstein achieved notoriety last September with his televised invitation to delegates from the Soviet bloc and some Third World countries asking them to leave if they didn't like the way they were being treated. "We will put no impedi-ment in your way." Lichenstein said during a meeting of the U.N. Host Committee. "I received thou-sands of letters," he commented. "People stopped me on the streets of New York, they bonked their horns, and shouted, 'Right on!' Practically every cop in Manhattan South gave me the high sign."
